

Categorical Grants

Unfunded Mandate

Federal Grants as Incentives

No Federal funding

NO FEDERAL FUNDING

Unfunded Mandate Strict and specific requirements

Very cheap for the federal government

Easy way for members of Congress to garner favor

State complain about unfairness and burdensome regulations

Undermines state cooperation

No Federal Influence No rules, or broad grants of power within programs

States have autonomy and pay for their own programs

Results in high diversity of policies, including inequality; promotes state competition and its outcomes

Calls for congressional and presidential restraint in exercising their powers

Unfunded Mandates in real life:

The No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 required that public schools administer state-wide standardized tests to students. If schools did not show yearly improvement on the tests, they had to take steps at their own expense to raise the quality of the education they provided.

No Federal Influence in real life:

Martin Luther King Jr. Day was established as a federal holiday (most federal employees get a paid day off) in 1968. But that was not binding on the states and a number resisted. It took until 2000 for all the states to recognize it, and some states used other names for a time, like "Civil Rights Day" (New Hampshire) or "Lee-Jackson-King Day" (Virginia).