

In India, many people must bathe in public in whatever water supply they can find. Even many people with homes do not have their own water supply. Privacy for one's grooming is a symbol of privilege for the affluent.