

Japan's Emperor Akihito (right) and Empress Michiko leave after praying at the altar of the late prince Tomohito. Japan has the only monarch in the world with the title emperor, a position that is inherited through the family line. This is an example of traditional authority.