

In a dump in Accra, the capital of Ghana, teenage boys can be seen smashing old computers and other electronic devices so that they can sell the metals inside to local businesses.