

Blood flow measurements in the brain using fMRI are made by having a person lie on his back inside a large magnet and radio frequency device.