

William Utermohlen, an American artist in London, drew self-portraits over a period of years to document the progressive effect on his brain of Alzheimer's disease.