

THE BIG PICTURE: WHO OWNS (AND CONTROLS) TODAY'S INFORMATION NETWORKS

Today most of our news comes from a handful of powerful sources. While some, like the New York Times are still independent, others are part of massive media conglomerates or, like the Washington Post, owned by Amazon's Jeff Bezos, tied in other ways to the information world. What implication does this ownership structure have for the news we get?

