

Case Study

Using Google Earth to Track Sexual Offending Recidivism

While the GIS software that was utilized by Rosenfeld et al. (1999) has many research advantages for displaying the spatial distributions of crime, researchers have begun to take advantage of other research mapping tools, including Google Earth. One such endeavor was conducted by Duwe, Donnay, and Tewksbury (2008), who sought to determine the effects